GSS Security Services, Inc. is Taking the Lead in Bringing Security Services and Personnel Into the 21st Century

Although the first verified private investigation organization in the U.S. was established in the 1850's by Allan Pinkerton, and the first private security agency here was founded in 1927 by William Burns, it seems that the need for security services in America has never been more paramount than it is right now in the 21st Century.

And that is also why the requests for GSS Security Services, Inc.'s services have never been higher or more frequent. When you have built a reputation over many years for reliability, professionalism, courtesy and discreetness, you keep getting repeat business and referrals from satisfied clients over and over again.

GSS was launched in 1994 primarily to service the security needs and requirements of the hotel, retail, special event and entertainment communities. Initially consisting of 20 full and part time employees handling two accounts in New York City, GSS has grown in nine years to boast a full complement of more than 260 full and part time employees in offices in Manhattan and White Marsh, MD, assisting clients in four states. Not only have the businesses of its core clientele grown and changed over the past decade, but so too have the scope and variety of GSS's services expanded and swelled since the company's inception.

Following horrific events of 9-11-01, GSS began an aggressive internal campaign to not only thoroughly educate all of its current and new employees on how best to anticipate and deal with these types of activities, but the company also put into place new, proprietary services it felt would be needed in the new Millennium.

One of these original, exclusive programs is GSS's Canine Explosives Detection Division, which the firm launched in early 2003. Under the direction of long-time Port Authority Police Department Sergeant and Supervisor Vincent Oliva, who is one of the most experienced law enforcement experts in the country in the canine explosives detection field, GSS has again taken a giant leap forward in offering its clients what has become a frequently-requested service.

With a business philosophy based on first-class service to its clients, understanding clients' needs and providing the best personnel in the business, GSS Security Services, Inc. is traveling proudly on the paths blazed by industry pioneers such as Alan Pinkerton and William Burns.
